Bahaddur kannada movie climax scene

Picture: Hughes Entertainment Holiday season is a time for family, friends and curling up on the couch, watching a great movie. Christmas movies have made their way into Christmas traditions, and it's clear why - holidays always fall during the coldest time of the year (in the northern hemisphere). There's nothing more welcoming than curling up with a giant cup of hot chocolate and watching a fun holiday movie. Christmas movies are full of magic, love and characters who learn a lot about humanity. These movies give us hope in a season that can sometimes make people feel a little down. Although all these movies seem to have a happy ending, they still pull our heart lines and make us have a bit teary-eyed. Pass the handkerchiefs, please! Holidays are a roller coaster of emotions, after all. We found 40 of the most memorable Christmas movies of all time and we want to know if you can name them. Fair warning: If you don't know which movie includes a family Christmas dinner at a Chinese restaurant, you may not pass this quiz. Copyright © 2020 InfoSpace Holdings, LLC, to System1 Company The first scene of a film is the hook. It envelops you and convinces you to dedicate the next, two, two, even three hours of your life to go down the rabbit hole of the director's imagined world. But probably more memorable - even more than a sex scene - is the final scene of a movie. It's the last impression you have and you can leave yourself with a persistent feeling of wanting more. And it can completely change your viewing experience. It can also be the best scene in a movie for the same reason. Whether it's because of an iconic song or a total touch of the plot, all these movies have left us both fully satisfied but also hungry for more. Each of these 17 movies saved the best last. Warning: This presentation contains spoilers. I mean, of course, it's the last scene in the movie, guys. But they are so good that you could honestly know the ending and still enjoy the whole movie over and over again. Trust me. Paramount Pictures/Getty Images Watching a great movie is probably the biggest escape in the world: for about two hours, you're taken to another time and place through incredible storytelling, brilliant acting, and amazing images and sounds. And, of course, the best can have a lasting impact over the generations. Check out the history of cinema with 25 of the best movie scenes from the greatest movies ever made. Advertising - Read on under 1 Away with the wind gone with the wind continues to be one of the most beloved movies ever created, but the line it will be associated with forever is: Frankly my dear, I don't give a damn. In an AFI poll, the most famous film quote of all time was named, but it almost never happened. It took months for David Selznick, the film's producer, to take the cursed word from the censored past. Before it was approved, other versions of the citation were considered, including Frankly my dear, I don't care. 2 The Wizard of Oz Released in 1939, The Wizard of Oz has been a beloved film for generations. According to the Library of Congress, it is the most watched film in the history of cinema. While the movie is full of unforgettable lines (Follow the yellow brick road and Toto, I have a feeling that we're no longer in Kansas are good examples), it's the final scene line - There's no place like home - that's in a league apart. 3 The Seven Year Itch Despite starring in nearly 30 films, the film most associated with the blonde actress will forever be The Seven Year Itch. The scene where Marilyn Monroe's dress explodes while standing above a subway grill has a permanent place in pop culture. The image inspired Halloween costumes, countless goods and artwork. The royal dress of the scene was auctioned in 2011 for as much as $5.6 million. 4 Breakfast at Tiffany's Without a single word mentioned during the nearly 3-minute clip, the opening scene of Breakfast at Tiffany's is one of the sequences of most famous in the history of cinema. It's said to have been hard to shoot (for reasons ranging from Hepburn's disgust at pastries on Fifth Avenue wanting to take a look at the actress), but Julie Andrews, the director's widow, revealed that the scene was shot in one shot at the film's 50th anniversary screening. 5 The Sound of Music How many of you have tried to recreate this scene after stumbling across an open field? We definitely did. The lawn where Julie Andrews ran and sang The Hills are alive, with the sound of music, is in Germany and, at the time of filming, farmers owned the land. Now, a well-known mountaineer is the proud owner and rarely leaves visitors on the famous hill. 6 Psycho If you've ever seen Psycho, chances are showering has never been the same after that. Actress Janet Leigh also admitted she was afraid to take a shower after making the film. I stopped showering and taking a bath, just bathrooms, he told the New York Times. Who can blame her? Although a knife was never seen penetrating his skin (which at the time would have gone against the production code) it is still one of the most terrifying movie scenes ever. 7 Mary Poppins On a much brighter note, Mary Poppins captured hearts everywhere after its release in 1964. The film continues to be a must for all ages. From A Spoonful of Sugar to Let's Go Fly to Kite, the family-friendly movie is filled with memorable music scenes. But no one comes close to the song with the title that no one can write at the top of their head, but everyone loves: Supercalifragilisticexpialidocious. 8 King Kong There are movie monsters, and then there's King Kong. More than seven decades have passed since the film's release, but King Kong continues to live as an icon of the film. Since its release, it has inspired many other movies, books, cartoons, video games, and even rides in the theme park, and no one can forget that scene where Kong climbs to the top of the Empire State Building clutching actress Fay Wray. 9 The Godfather Many consider the 1972 film to be the best film of all time. Despite being the studio's last choice for the role, Marlon Brando brilliantly gave birth to Don Corleone, jaw and all. The film begins by introducing us to the famous gangster, while pets his cat. Some fun facts: The feline was actually a stray, and Brando wore a mouthpiece that took three hours to apply. The object is currently on display at the Museum of the Moving Image in New York. 10 Frankenstein All you need are two words (It's Alive!) to remind movie buffs of this unforgettable scene, which shows Frankenstein's monster came to life. The story itself has been around for almost 200 years, and has since found its way into pop culture countless times. From other movies to books and TV shows, Frankenstein's story will be alive forever. 11 Jaws If you are afraid of sharks, you can thank this movie. The special effects of the 1975 film, they don't look as sophisticated as those from today's movies, but we think the movie remains terrifying, especially the scene You'll need a bigger boat. Great. Singing in the Rain One of the most iconic dance numbers in film history, Gene Kelly's 1952 performance of Singing in the Rain set the bar for musicals. It is rumored that the scene was filmed in a shoot, but it really took two and a half days, according to Gene's widow, and at one point she even danced through fever. 13 The Graduate No cinematic moment captured the generational gap of the 1960s better than Dustin Hoffman's Benjamin Braddock's seduction by Anne Bancroft's Mrs. Robinson in The Graduate, tv guide says. While Bancroft was only six years older than Hoffman in real life, their performance became an instant classic, making Hoffman a nocturnal success. 14 Casablanca Casablanca is over 70 years old, but no roundup of classic movies is complete without it. While the whole movie is worth more views, this clip is the most famous and has the best line: Here you go, boy. 15 The Empire strikes again even if you've never seen The Empire Strikes Back (did you live under a rock?), chances are you've heard countless imitations of the line Luke, I'm your father. But in fact, it's one of the most misspelled jokes in movie history: the real line Darth Vader offers is No, I'm your dad. 16 West Side Story Based on Shakespeare's play Romeo and Juliet, the 1961 film adaptation of the Broadway musical West Side Story will go down forever as one of the most innovative musical films ever. (Funny fact: Director Robert Wise's genius once again enchanted the world four years later with the release of The Sound of Music.) 17 From here to eternity The beach, the waves, the kisses. Every element of this scene makes it an iconic moment in the history of cinema. The film, of course, tells a much larger story about World War II and Pearl Harbor, but it's this beach tryst that has become a cinematic treasure. 18 The Breakfast Club After knocking down the stereotypes of high school cliques, the breakfast club's final scene is to be remembered. It's hard to think of this film without immediately imagining Judd Nelson pumping his fist into the air, but according to MTV.com the gesture wasn't written in the original script. Nelson improvised the triumphant position during filming. 19 Scarface We have all heard this line, whether we have seen Scarface or not. As Al Pacino's Tony Montana prepares to fight his rivals who have infiltrated his villa, the famous line screams. It also got a place on AFI's list of the 100 best movie quotes. 20 Lady and the Tramp Mention the spaghetti scene to anyone, and they'll know exactly what you're talking about. This Disney classic is over 60 years old, but everyone still loves watching this puppy romance, especially this clip. But the most famous scene of the it almost didn't happen. Walt Disney took it out of the film's early storyboards. Walt wasn't convinced it was going to be a very clean scene. As you can imagine, if you have two pets and eat a plate of spaghetti, it's hard who is too graceful, former archivist Steven Vagnini told Yahoo. 21 Rocky If this scene doesn't make you want to conquer the world, not much will. Rocky's iconic ride up the stairs of the Philadelphia Museum of Art turned out to be legendary, as stairs are still one of Philadelphia's top tourist attractions. There is also a statue of the character Rocky Balboa nearby. 22 E.T. the Extraterrestrial As a child what could be more exciting than cycling through the sky with your new alien friend? The cinematography of this scene is captivating and the silhouette of Elliott's bike with E.T. in the basket is one of the most recognized images of the film. 23 Forrest Gump Tom Hanks had already won an Oscar when he took on the role of Forrest Gump, but it was the 1994 film about a slow and simple man who transformed his career forever (and won him another Oscar, of course). 24 Titanic There's never been such a romantic scene as this. Watching a young Leonardo DiCaprio slamming Kate Winslet on the bow of the doomed Titanic has fluttered movie fans since 1997. We'll never get tired of watching Jack Dawson hold Rose's hips as he stretches his arms and declares: I'm flying! 25 The Princess Bride The opening scene of The Bride Princess sets the tone for the quirky but romantic film. We're sure there are a lot of people who have used Westley's famous joke. As you wish, as another way of saying I love you and hey, we don't blame them: it worked on Princess Buttercup.
